Carmignac Emergents<sup>1</sup> recorded a performance of +2.61% in the first quarter of 2021, compared with a +6.48% increase in its reference indicator<sup>2</sup>.

What happened in Emerging Markets during the first quarter of 2021?

During the quarter, emerging-market equities extended the rally kicked off in March last year after the leading central banks, particularly the Fed and the ECB, moved to expand their balance sheets with highly aggressive quantitative easing. However, the market rally in this first quarter was different from the one in 2020 because this time cyclical and value stocks outperformed growth stocks. That difference resulted from rising nominal and real US interest rates, particularly on the long end of the yield curve. Investors have begun to price in the gradual re-opening of economies, including the retail, service and tourism sectors, encouraged by steep declines in Covid-19 hospitalisations and deaths in countries that have reached high vaccination levels.

How was the fund positioned?

Against this backdrop, given our positioning, focusing primarily on long-term growth themes with little exposure to cyclical industries, the Fund lagged its reference indicator<sup>2</sup>. It is worth pointing out, however, that we did partially anticipate the sector and thematic rotation that followed the significant outperformance by growth stocks in 2020. That is why, at the beginning of the year, we proactively increased our exposure to commodity-exporting countries such as Russia and Brazil and stepped up our allocation to quality cyclical names in South Korea such as Hyundai and Samsung Electronics and to Maruti Suzuki and ICICI Lombard in India.

During the first quarter, we also continued our profit taking strategy, reducing or closing positions on stocks we consider having stretched and overpriced valuations, exiting our holdings in China's two electric-vehicle manufacturers, Nio and BYD. This sector has been rendered highly attractive by Beijing's ambitions and recent regulations to promote the shift to e-Mobility. However, based on our analysis, we still believe that those stocks are currently overvalued as new Chinese and foreign competitors enter the market, inevitably exerting downward pressure on profit margins. We have therefore changed our focus in the EV sector by investing in LG Chem, a South Korean battery-maker that has become one of our largest holdings, accounting for 3.9% of the Fund's net assets (as of 31/03/2021). As the sector is characterised by high barriers to entry (in terms of both technology and capital expenditure), we expect attractive profits perspectives for the leading players in this space – with LG Chem being one of them.

We also added Fix Price, Russia's leading retailer of low-priced products, to our portfolio during the quarter. Since the mid-2010s, Carmignac Emergents has largely pulled out of retailers like superstores, but even smaller-scale outfits as well. We feel that with the ongoing digital revolution putting considerable pressure on the business models of those companies, delivery and logistics providers are capturing an increasing share of the value added in the business. With regard to Fix Price, our view is that discount variety stores are the only format that can still be profitable in a digital era, given that e-commerce cannot match their low prices, least of all in Russia due to logistics constraints. This new position has given Russia a 6.5% weighting in the Fund's net assets (as of 31/03/2021), which is still primarily invested in Asia (80% of total assets). This reflects the attractive economic fundamentals of a region featuring higher growth and better economic governance than its other emerging and developed market peers.

What is our outlook for the coming months?

Focus on Beneficiaries of Digital Revolution & Long-Term Demographic Trends

We have kept our constructive outlook on China, which is still our biggest country allocation, accounting for 40.7% of total assets including Hong Kong (as of 31/03/2021). In our view, China is home to the world’s most effectively managed major economy. Beijing’s fiscal and monetary orthodoxy stands in contrast to the skyrocketing debt levels of developed-world households, companies and governments, leaving the country with sounder economic fundamentals. The renminbi has in fact been the strongest major currency in the world since the onset of the pandemic.

During the quarter, we added a new Chinese name to our portfolio. Tuya, the world’s number-one Internet-of-Things company<sup>3</sup>, has developed an entire ecosystem of connected objects (electrical outlets, light bulbs, thermostats, lighting, roller blinds, alarms, water and gas valves, video entry phones, cameras, entrance gates, garage doors, sprinklers, circuit-breakers, home appliances and more) that enables users to control their “smart homes” remotely via a single app. We believe that the Internet-of-Things could well represent the next stage in the industrial revolution. And as the world leader in that business, we believe Tuya is poised to benefit from its first-mover advantage, as well as on the fact that it is in the interests of all companies to be dealing with a single application platform.

We also initiated a position in Ehang, China’s top electric-drone manufacturer. The company’s drones are already in use in China for topographic mapping, aerial photography and fire-fighting. But the market has yet to price in the potential of air taxis – and Ehang has already signed several contracts<sup>4</sup> for such taxis with a number of tourist sites in various Chinese cities.

The Fund’s net assets are still primarily invested in Asia (80% of total assets, as of 31/03/2021). This reflects the attractive economic fundamentals of a region featuring higher growth and better economic governance than its other emerging and developed market peers.
